WHEELING, W. VA., JUNE 17, 1886.

Costly Traveling.

If Mr. Holman were in earnest about lapping off unnecessary and unwarranted expenditures, he would select the mileage of Congressmen for one of his savings luncheon. If the Congressmen were all Republicans Mr. Holman would be glad to do it. The law provides that each Senator and Representative shall receive twenty cents for each mile traveled in going from his home to the Capital and returning—round trip tickets at the reduced rate of forty cents a mile! To assemble the present Congress and send it home the people pay $143,040 in mileage.

The law was passed before the days of cheap travel, broken pool agreements and ticket scalpers. The rate per mile was not too great for canal-boat and stage-coach transportation. In this day it has become a mere gratuity under a transparent disguise. A member of Congress residing in Wheeling would travel 353 miles each way, and this would cost the country $141.20. The cost to the honorable member would be $30 railroad fare for the round trip. If he traveled by night and took a "sleeper," that would add four dollars for the round trip. A total sum of $30 would pay for the railroad fare, sleeping berth, meals, newspapers, porter's fees, cigars, traveling cap, prize package, gum drops, glass box of figs, caramels, photographic views of Washington and such minor odds and ends as a Congressman might need to make him comfortable on the journey.

The more remote the Congressman's home the farther he cuts it. Five cents a mile each way would be a liberal provision, particularly when we remember that it is the pleasant practice of your Congressman to ride on "dead-head" passes.

War Declared Against England.
Our esteemed contemporary, Mr. Jeremiah O'Donovan, surmised the Red, regards the present as his time for reappearing. So long as the House of Commons was listening to the plea for Ireland—up to the hour of the defeat of Mr. Gladstone's measure—no utterance from Mr. O'Donovan would have received any special attention, and this that shrewd campaigner well knew.

But now between the defeat of the home rule bill and the elections he thinks he sees his opportunity to resume a suspended business. He declares that he has left England alone for a year, but the defeat of the home rule bill has exhausted his patience, and he gives notice that he intends to resume operations in the field at once. The cities of England are to be attacked with fire and explosives. A reign of terror is to be begun. Blood is to flow like beer at Whitehall. Mr. O'Donovan means to conduct the assault in person from his headquarters in New York.

Just at this time nothing would be more to the hand of the Tory enemies of Ireland than a little sporadic dynamiting. It would be the one most opportune thing. It would consolidate with them in the coming election that middle-class element upon which Mr. Gladstone must draw largely or he cannot elect a Parliament that will give Ireland home rule. It would furnish material for denunciations in which every Irish Nationalist would be made to appear to be an O'Donovan dynamiter.

The Tories are rich in ready money, and if Jeremiah can convince them that he is able to do the things he threatens, they won't quarrel about the price. And if he really can't do anything terrible but will keep up the terrifying wagging of his awful tongue, they might even be willing to pay him well for that. In the approach of British campaign there are boundless opportunities for a man of Jeremiah O'Donovan's peculiar talents.

Stealing the Liver of the Dairy.
It may be, as the scientific experts say, that oleomargarine is made of "pure materials and is as wholesome an article as butter." If this be true at all it is probably true of some oleomargarine, not all. However this may be, the thing is not the butter of the fathers.

Butter is so old a commodity that everybody understands it to be a certain thing, produced by churning the cream raised by the milk drawn from the cow. That which is not so produced is not butter at all, and to call it by that name is to steal the liver of the dairy to serve Mammon. It is the fraud of the thing against which the greatest objection lies.

If anybody prefers bogus butter to the genuine article let him have it, and let him be sure he is getting that and none other. While there is so much confusion of terms and appearances the man with the oleo appetite is in great danger of being swayed by some conscienceless dealer who palms off real butter for the bogus article. The consumer ought to be sure that he is getting what he wants. We are not confident of the success of the measure to tax oleomargarine if it becomes a law, nor convinced that the bill proposed the right remedy. It is worth while to try it, because something is better than nothing.

The main point is to force the bogus butter plate to fly his own flag. This accomplished, in whatever way, the American cow can hold her own or need to blush for the degeneracy of the times.

A Reproduction in Miniature.

From the telegraphed accounts of the destruction of Vancouver by fire, it seems that this calamity has reproduced on a small scale the Great Fire in London in 1666 which destroyed the city from the Tower to the Temple. There was the same completeness of destruction, and the details read as though they might have been taken from the accounts of more than two centuries ago.

Papa, who was not given to lurid writing, says: "The fire grew more and more, and in corners and upon steeples, and between churches and houses, as far as we could see up the hill of the city, in almost horrid, malicious, bloody flame, not like the flame of an ordinary fire. We see the fire as only one arch of fire, an arch above a mile long; it made me weep to see it." And Evelyn tells the story still more picturesquely. "God grant mine eyes may never behold the like what saw above ten thousand houses all in one flame; the noise and cracking and thunder of the impetuous flames, the shrieking of women and children, the hurry of people, the fall of towers, houses and churches, was like an hideous storm, and the air all about so hot and inflamed that at the last one was not able to approach it."

As happened later in little Vancouver, the streets were blocked with carts hurrying to the water with the effects of the homeless, miserable people. "The poor inhabitants were dispersed about St. George's Fields and Moorfields as far as Highgate, some under tents, some under miserable huts and hovels, many without a rag or any necessary utensils, bed or board, who from delicacies, riches and easy accommodations, in stately and well-furnished houses, were now reduced to extreme misery and poverty." The London of 1666 was largely a wooden city, and so it was with little Vancouver. But London's Great Fire, with all its cost, burnt out the plague, which had decimated the city but the year before.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

The Fourth comes on the fifth this year, Nevada has 1,500,000 acres of land for sale.

The Mount Vernon Association proposes to restore the tomb of Washington.

The National W. C. T. U. headquarters have been removed from New York to Chicago.

"A regular root rooker and gully washer" is the description of a recent Texas rain storm.

The Los Angeles (Cal.) authorities arrest all young persons found on the streets after 9 p. m.

Many of the medals of the Canadian volunteers have been found in the pawnshops of Montreal.

The Presbyterian General Assembly refused to commit its members to prohibition as the only temperance doctrine.

For some time there has been a decrease in the immigration into this country.

The tide now has turned and it is again increasing.

A log jam, consisting of 30,000 feet of logs, at the foot of a falls in Vermont, is engaging the live efforts of 200 men in its dislodgment.

Mrs. Rosella Scroggins, of Gainesville, Ga., claims to be the oldest person in the State, and she probably is, being in her 107th year. She hears well and is quite active.

The State of Illinois has been fooled by a fraudulent cork log, which was presented to her as having been shed by Santa Anna at Cerro Gordo. It turns out to have belonged to a man from Rotterdam, N. Y.

Gold coins to the value of $700, the latest date upon any of them being 1891, were found in a pill and used a large floor on Wednesday, at Suspension Bridge, N. Y., by workmen who were demolishing the structure.

The project to use the water power of Niagara at Lockport, N. Y., is taking shape, a company formed for the purpose having begun preliminary operations. It is estimated that 300,000 horse power can be made available at Lockport if so much should be needed.

The Cherry Pie.

With the coming of cherries, the old question as to the wholesomeness or unwholesomeness of pie is revived. That pie is a great American institution is a fact which is acknowledged from the pine hills of Maine to the orange groves of Southern California, and from the winter hotels of Florida to where the salmon-filled streams flow through Oregon's rocky wastes; and that it is a good institution is one of those things which it is treason to deny. What man with a crisp, juicy piece of cherry pie before him could do ought but say that it is delicious? The only trouble with pie is that, like other good things, we are prone to abuse it. We must take it easy, Dr. Holmes, in angles of twenty-five to thirty degrees and not in quadrants or semicircles. Emerson ate pie for breakfast all his life and died unconscious of a dyspeptic twinge, and perhaps it was this tender delicacy that inspired many of his sweet and profound sayings. Who can tell? The American pie—the home-made, not the cast-iron bake-shop article—is the very perfection of native culinary art. How superior it is to the French fruit "kuchen." The French tart, that abomination of indigestible pastry, is not to be compared with it. It stands alone on a lofty pedestal of unapproachable excellence, and let us, now that cherries are ripe, come to it with thankfulness and a determination to rightly "take the gifts the gods provide us."

The Beginning of Cleveland's Luck.

Cleveland's lucky career had its foundation in a circumstance not generally known. When elected Mayor of Buffalo he found in the office Major Cutting, who had officiated as Mayor's Secretary during the terms of several incumbents, and who was since died. Major Cutting, who was retained by Cleveland, was a man of unusual strength of character and a forcible writer. The celebrated veto message of a municipal seal, which caused Cleveland to be mentioned and nominated for Governor, was written by Cutting. It was not the veto that made Cleveland locally popular so much as the bold terms in which the proposed terms were denounced and the municipal thieves raked over the coals. No honest Mayor could have done otherwise than to take the measure, but Buffalo never had a Mayor who could use the English language to such good effect as could Major Cutting, and as he did on that occasion. Cutting was a Republican, and Cleveland never did a luckier thing for himself than in retaining his services.

Entitled to the Money.

Minnie Palmer has still $5,000 on offer in the English papers for the best and most novel means of advertising. A masher recently suggested that she should print her advertisements on toothpicks, for then her name was sure to be in everybody's mouth.

The Cincinnati Enquirer considers the President's wedding a "splendid vindication of the American name for veracity."

Yes, and for audacity, pugnacity and jacksnipe.

People still advertise in Washington newspapers offering large premiums to those who can get them government positions.

Sharp Fange Awaits the Forehead.

And in the frontier of the neck and shoulder, usually most violent after nightfall, are among the chiefest manifestations of neuralgia. It is an affection of the nerve intensified by cold. Repose, bringing with it a cessation of pain, is induced by Housler's Stomach Bitters, which is a tonic and astringent. It is also a reliable means of checking neuralgia and post. These malades have always more or less to do with the kidneys, which inactive fall to three of two inches which encumber them. The Bitters can be relied upon to remove a healthy and purifying action on the system. Besides this, it gives tone to the stomach, liver and bowels, and enriches the circulation. Appetite and sleep both profit by it, and it is a well-accustomed means of fortifying the system against malaria. It hastens the recovery of strength in convalescence, and cures the infirmities of age, and helps the constitutionally feeble.
